THANKSGIVING SERMON.

preach a sermon on an occasion like this, we must do it manfully, or refuse to do it at all. As the speaker in the sacred desk on a day appointed for "thanksgiving and prayer," we feel that we are bound in honest duty to specify, what we conceive in honest truth to be, the blessings for which we should be thankful, and the existing State-evils for the correction "a day of thanksgiving and prayer." existing State-evils for the correction Among the events of the year we can see of which we should this day pray. We might now go on to point out many sins that are prevalent among our people, such as the facility with which offense is taken, and the proneness to seek redress in the use of deadly weapons, drunkenness, profaneness, extravagance, and many other prevalent wrongs and fol-iles. But it is our appointed duty to speak continually against all such; and here, to-day, feeling justified in the occasion, we only particularize those State-evils which we do not feel at liberty to bring forward in our ordinary ministrations. And this part of our duty is now done—faithfully and fearing. The tribes of Jacob constituted the "United States" of Israel. The essential idea of their " Feast of Tabernacles which was partly civil and partly religious, is perpetuated among us in the day that is annually appointed for "thanksgiving and prayer." There were those things in the Feast, as cele-brated by the Israelites, which were peculiar to themselves as a people, and also those things which were typical in their significance; all of which have pared away, leaving the essential idea of the Feast remaining with us as a perpetual obligation, to observe an annua day of thanksgiving and prayer unto our God, in which to recognize Him as the Lord of our harvest, and the King of our rulers. Thanksgiving Day is not privilege of setting himself right before the public in relation to the sermon that he preached at Campbells' Station, the be so blind as not to see that we have divine appointment of the Lord Jehoday are human inventions-man-made With peace and plenty, the State is also additions. It is not a day for hunting sporting, frolicing, and carousal. It is not a holiday—it is a holyday—and as a tolyday it should be observed in the Church and in the Family-a day for public thanksgiving and prayer in the and joyous festivities in the home. In our Churches we should meet i the spirit of religious patriotism-as correct.
